"Nothing Ventured, Nothing Have."

MR. ROBERT COBURN

CREATOR OF FASHIONS
FOR THE FASHIONABLE
WOMEN OF AMERICA

The Extravagant Costliness of this Summer's Negligees.

Empire styles the fashion with flowing draperies and rich elaborations in trimmings.

Gold thread embroidery mingled with lace and chiffon upon satin.

Chiffon and satin more popular among the Smart Set than wash fabrics for negligees.

Pompadour roses a fad in decorations upon satin.

Pink and cream color favorite tints in negligees.

A feature of the new negligee is to achieve stately dignity combined with limitless extravagance in workmanship and materials.

The square-cut revers and collar of the bodice are of silver crepe with diamond designs upon lace set, and these are edged with the silver braid framed in the peculiarly quilted satin ribbon. The curve of the fronts is bordered with silver braid framing the quilted ribbon in cream-colored satin. The decorated collar and revers fall over a rich collar of spousure lace, which, to the back, takes on the shape of a wide border in a square collar of tulle white chiffon. The chiffon is trimmed with three rows of narrow bias folds of chiffon put on in wavy, pointed lines above the border and the entire collar hangs over one of tulle with a tulle plaiting on the edge. Naturally such a collar would almost cover a bodice, and the eye is attracted and pleased by the diversity of the materials used in its construction and their entire harmony with each other. A full vent of white tulle in each square across the top.

If course every one cannot afford these magnificent negligees, but dainty ones of cheaper materials can be made up along the same lines and look quite as sweet in their way.

B.—White chiffon negligee trimmings with Louis XV. bands and lace.

THE negligees which have blossomed out with the roses of June look as though the fair women who selected them had been delving among the corners of the past and had brought out the most beautiful and becoming of the court robes of forgotten fashions and had them revived in creations of wonderful loveliness. Some have fastened the stately and magnificent garment of rich brocade, made in sweeping lines and adorned with rare lace and marvellous needlework, and others have chosen robes suggestive only of June roses and pearls and all things dainty and feminine. Such a negligee is shown in Figure A, one of the most charming possible creations of pink satin veiled with deep cream-colored Chantilly lace, put on quite full. There is a flower-like richness about the folds of the train, enhanced by the decoration upon the bottom of the gown. This consists of delicate wreaths of leaves made of pink satin, and the upper edge of the skirt is edged with a row of small roses, between each of which is a small leaf. The skirt is quite large and the three lower it is quite full.

On each side the full front panel, where the waist terminates, is set a big pink satin rose, each petal made of a fold of pink satin. This big rose is continued up the side of the gown, coming in at the waist and the decoration is continued up the front, on each side the panel, by means of bands of smaller satin roses, which curve like little wreaths at intervals and have a little satin rose in each wreath. These are woven in the lace down the middle of the skirt, and among these roses are set at close intervals otherwise the front is unswerving and simple. From the middle of the skirt the lace train is gathered, very full, and this gives a stately appearance to an otherwise fairly plain gown. The yoke of the negligee is cut in Empire style, and around the shoulders tucked over, medallions are placed in wreaths of satin leaves and roses lying upon slight mounds of tulle. A big rose adorns each side of the front, and the sleeves and lower of the wreaths cross at the center. In the middle of the back is placed another big rose, similar to those in the front of the negligee. Pink satin ribbons give shape to the top of the negligee below the wreaths, and these are edged with three quilted ruffles and finished with two satin bows that head a tulle. The little bows of satin ribbon are set above the fastenings in front. The long, skirted sleeves have three shirred cords to the inside and a wreath of roses at the bottom. The upper part of the long sleeve joins up to the elbow in a pretty effect of puff. Over the sleeve falls a long, wide drape of chiffon, curved downward in the back, and bordered with scalloped lace gillies.

A charming effect for a Pretty Negligee. In elegant simplicity, Figure B contrasts with the magnificence of the one-sleeved negligee. This other dainty article of semi-sleeved is shown in Figure C, one of the most charming possible creations of pink satin veiled with deep cream-colored Chantilly lace, put on quite full. There is a flower-like richness about the folds of the train, enhanced by the decoration upon the bottom of the gown. This consists of delicate wreaths of leaves made of pink satin, and the upper edge of the skirt is edged with a row of small roses, between each of which is a small leaf. The skirt is quite large and the three lower it is quite full.

These Louis XV. pointed bands admit of some of the loveliest imaginable curves and drape, and what is one reason why they are so popular. One of these smart bands encircles the shoulders and curves in acroft and down on the top of the sleeves. These are of white lace, very full, and with long flowing in the back. Around the neck of the negligee is a wide band of white lace, which is a ribbon in its run to draw the fullness of the lace into a neat fit. Not only are smart negligees made up of chiffon and rich lace, but they are built over silk and satin foundations, befitting and founded in the most lavish manner. Opulence is suggested in every furrow and upon the smart negligee, which gives the impression of serving no purpose except to make a woman look her prettiest. There is, too, a certain amount of luxuriousness to be derived from wearing a negligee. One may drape, wear or loosen them and be thoroughly comfortable without affecting in the least the graceful folds of the costly garment which envelops them. The Opulent Extravagance of the New Negligee. More suggestive of the court dresses of other days than of those in vogue in the present is the fetching negligee shown in Figure C, a creation for afternoon wear that makes one think of the robes worn by the ladies in one of the great novels of the past, when heroines were always pink of beauty and staidness, and usually of the royal persuasion. Some queen might well have gazed at this of a wonderful new pink silk, like pink coral, but with a light and brocade shimmering over the pink satin life in the color that is as though pale underneath is wonderfully beautiful.

sunlight shows through the meshes of the satin, of which it is made. Both full bodice and full skirt are gathered to a narrow belt in the quaintest of styles, and the train and skirt are edged upon each side of the front, which is of cream-colored satin crossed near the bottom by two wide bands of satin and rich gold thread embroidery. These stiff bands, set above a deep hem, cause the train to stand away from the feet, but the trimming is not stiff enough to prevent soft folds in the material. Everything now has a tendency to fall in soft and graceful folds. Two bands extend down the front, decorated with satin ornaments, embroidery of silver thread and designs woven in pearls and other jewels. These bands give an air of stately extravagance to the gown which is enhanced by the borders at the sides of the front panel, which are of silver and gold braid framed in satin ribbons over an inch in width, plaited in the plait and twisted to imitate woven straw braid of a delicate pink color. This novel trimming is quite wonderful in its effect and charms one at first glance. The plaiting of the ribbon in this peculiar manner makes it take on all sorts of light and shadow effects which are calculated to bring out to advantage the beauty of the trimming near the ribbon. Inside this border is a very wide band of net embroidered over with large silver roses in raised patterns, spangled with diamond dewdrops. The effect of this net and embroidery shimmering over the pink satin is as though pale underneath is wonderfully beautiful.

A LITTLE John

United States Last Find No to the Boll Weevil

A LITTLE bug as big as the last year in one Southern belt is the dread of the borer a hole in the boll of a worm, and this young crop of America—a crop worth nearly that ingenuity could suggest has been eminent experts of the United States over for some manner of bird, bug, or weevil—AND AT LAST ONE HAS

A little red ant that lives in Guatemala to the boll weevil. This ant is its particular delight to kill the boll weevil. Professor O. H. Cook, of the Guatemala studying the habits of the red ant Southern cotton fields. The ant has would behave away from home, and here cotton field.

It has taken John D. Rockefeller $1,000,000,000. In view of the rapidly figured that the little Guatemalan ant a thousand million dollars' worth of Nature's enemy of the weevil may be easily realized when it is understood that this weevil has borne promise of becoming the most destructive enemy ever encountered by man. Last year it destroyed $47,735,000 worth of cotton in Texas, to which State it is as yet confined. But it is spreading steadily onward at the rate of fifty miles per annum, and unless something can be done to check its progress it will soon have spread all over the cotton belt of the South. When that is accomplished, it may cause an annual loss of $250,000,000.

Such, up to now, has been the appalling prospect. But the outlook is suddenly changed by the discovery of this ant, which is the long-sought foe of the weevil. Its favorite occupation is the killing of beet and this species, and, when it arrives on a says that cotton plant, there is no further chance single for the pestiferous insect. It murders them, every one.

The discovery of the ant was not merely a lucky accident. For last two years the Government Bureau of Entomology has been trying to find an enemy of the cotton-boll weevil, with a view to introducing it in the United States. Experts have been traveling all over Mexico, Cuba and Central America in pursuit of the possible weevil destroyer. Which, it was thought, must exist somewhere. It was in Yucatan, however, in a few weeks ago, when Professor O. H. Cook was led to pay a visit to the province of Alta Vera Paz, in Guatemala.

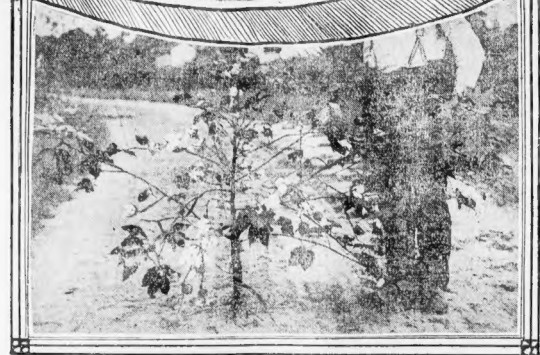

On receiving Professor Cook's report on the subject, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson at once wired him to call upon the department for whatever assistance he might require in the way of money or men. No expenditure of cash or trouble would be deemed too great in a case of this sort. If the ant could be obtained for it, the value of a few dozen specimens would be enormous, supposing that a greater number could not be secured. But, as a matter of fact, the insects are obtainable in Washington, a consignment of them, alive and healthy, in a perforated tin box, together with a few pieces of sugar cane placed, to supply them with food.

When they arrive they will be carefully inspected by Professor O. H. Howard and his assistant entomologists, who will not only identify and name the species, and proper measures will be taken to propagate them in large numbers. To do this should be difficult, however, as they are reported to have none of the vicious biting habits which distinguish many tropical ants, and, sugar being their favorite food, it ought to be practicable to rear them easily enough.

It does not appear that the ant feeds upon the boll-weevil. On the contrary, it is attracted to the cotton plant by the sweet juice which the "mealybugs" or honey-containing glands of the latter afford. But it is at least conceivable that the ant, which belongs to the most intelligent of insect tribes, recognizes the character of the bug that destroys the source of its food supply, and kills it in order to kill the weevil. In the other hand, it does not do the least injury to the cotton or to any other plant, so far as has been ascertained, and, by reason of its precise disposition toward ants, it can be handled with impunity.

"These ants," says Professor Cook, "probably came originally from the Indians of Alta Vera Paz, from the dry, open interior plateau region, where the centre of the aboriginal cotton industry of Guatemala is still to be seen. It is, however, in every way important, because it would signify that the insects are natives of a moderately cool climate—a fact which would have

When it comes to a tackle, the boll weevil has small chance against the ferocious ant. The latter has a great advantage in size, and is provided with a strong mouth and sharp teeth or tusks for biting. The weevil is active, but has only a thick sucking mouth, and cannot possibly get away from the ant, which is able to lock its legs and to jump a considerable distance, if necessary.

Not only the beetle-shaped, full grown weevil, but also the immature larvae or grub of the weevil are destroyed by the ants. These worms, feeding inside the cotton bolls, are hunted by the ants, which crawl in through the holes previously bored by the adult weevils, when they went in to lay the eggs. The ants tear the larvae to pieces, apparently with a fury of anger.

These facts have already been reported to the Bureau of Entomology by Prof. Cook, who is still investigating the ants among the cotton fields of the Indians in Guatemala. Further evidence of the successful work of the ant comes from the fact that the ants, when a colony of the ants were turned loose on trial this summer. The Secretary of Agriculture has received a dispatch from San Antonio, Texas, stating that the field of cotton, covering about six hundred acres, have been entirely cleared of the boll-weevil by millions of ants, now warning on the plains.

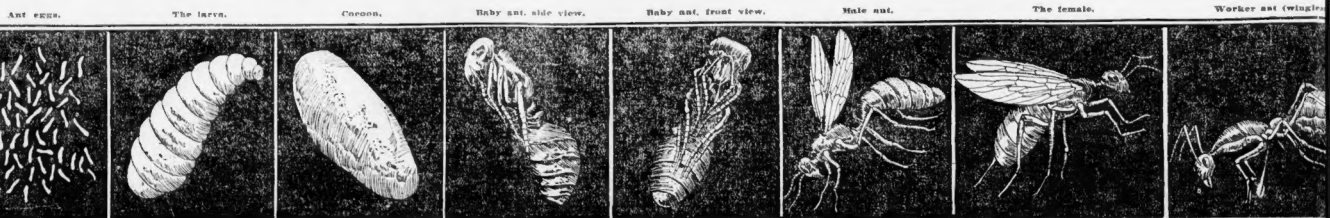

The made near the field are said to be filled with ants carrying off the dead boll-weevils. Secretary Wilson has directed expert entomologists connected with his Department, who are now in Texas, to remain in the cotton fields and study the ant and its habits and customs and methods of breeding them in enormous quantities.

The tremendous importance attached to the discovery of

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10. Just why a certain small red ant, native of Guatemala, South America, specially delights in killing the cotton-boll weevil is not yet quite clear to the experts of the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture. This will be studied out later on. Whatever other matters this ant may have on hand it will take them aside long enough to destroy every weevil that comes within its reach. The ant rushes at the weevil, seizes it by the throat with its 'feelers,' and, holding it with a firm grasp, the ant crushes in the weevil's skull with its saw-toothed tusks. For some reason not yet understood the ant then takes the trouble to climb down the cotton plant with the corpse of the weevil and carry it away. It does not eat it.

Prince Rangi Uia, Son of the Maori Chief who was brought to London by the Princess of Wales, and is the Reigning Fad of Society.

THE SLAVE SONG THAT CAPTURED LONDON—GOMPOSED BY PRINCE RANGI UIA.

A BROWN-SKINNED Prince, descendant of man-eating ancestors, is the rage of all London. He has a tender voice that thrills the very souls of the fair-haired, white-faced foreigners. He breathes out his plaintive "Te Aroha E Hine," and they forget that among his relatives and friends are many who were captured in human flesh. He himself is delightful, dainty, of course, and, above all, he bears the stamp of royal favor. For, indeed, he was discovered by the Prince and Princess of Wales when they made their recent tour of the British Colonies. Rangi Uia captivated them on an active soil. The way of it is a story in itself, and the way he has captivated all London is another. He has been heard at more than half the great receptions and musicales of the present season. He has been acclaimed in London as an artist by Madame Tietze, and he is announced as the big end of the Maori great lords and ladies in the drawing rooms of those who have announced him. Prince of Wales will entertain him, and the Metropolitan Opera House next year is expected to be the educational stage.

Rangi Uia is a Maori chief, a direct descendant of the great founder of the tribe that bears his name. His mother is a Maori Queen and his father a mighty power in the land of coconut and crocodile. He is big and swarthy, his nose is generous and broad; his mouth is full-lipped but well curved; he has great, deep black eyes, heavily lashed, and a mass of coal-black hair. By request he wears his native costume, in which his royal highness first discovered him. It is unique and still remains so, for you may be sure that no English American male will dare to copy it. The Maori Prince has muscular beauty, as you can see, and, in fact, muscular and dark as his face, and lovely presented to the gaze of English aristocrats. On one neck or above.

As for his dress—indeed, it is more than three hundred years old. It is a treasured specimen to be as tenderly handled as a crown. It is a crown of lace. The

A MAORI PRINCE.
After the dance was over a tall, courtly gentleman in a frock coat and a silk hat, a graduate of Wellington University, who bore the degree of M. A. and was presented to their royal highnesses. His manner was a mixture of grave oratorical dignity and the genial bonhomie of a man of the world. He was the son of the Maori chief Rangi Uia, the young warrior whose voice had thrilled the ears of royalty. The Prince and Princess graciously urged him to come to England. They told him there was no voice in all their country better than his; they assured him he would create a sensation, particularly if he appeared in his native costume.

The house of Rangi Uia is poor; years of rebellion and controversy have stripped the land of its riches. The son of the powerful chief has been driven from his home, and he has spent much of his life in the shadow of the Maori. He has been driven from his home, and he has spent much of his life in the shadow of the Maori. He has been driven from his home, and he has spent much of his life in the shadow of the Maori.

FOXY GRANDPA'S FAIRY TALES. "How I Saved Little Red Riding Hood."

The Fairy Tale as Foxy
Grandpa Told It to His Boys.

YOU see, boys, little Red Riding Hood had almost reached her grandmother's cottage when I overtook her. She didn't know the wicked wolf was waiting there in grandma's bed to eat her up.

So I handed her my hat and coat and slipped her hood over my head to disguise myself. Then I gallily tripped into the cottage just as Red Riding Hood would have done. I was holding a big ax behind my back, but of course Mr. Foxy Wolf didn't know that. Red Riding Hood stayed outside the door to see what happened.

"Good morning, granny dear," said I. "See what I have brought for you."

As the wolf turned over on the pillow he saw my ax, but not in time to dodge the blow, and he fell out of bed dead.

And that's how I saved little Red Riding Hood, boys. She was awfully glad the wolf didn't get a chance to eat her after all.

BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, JUNE 12, 1904.

THEY HAVE NO EYES IN THEIR FEET.

They Walk Over the Backs of the Multitude. The Humble, Bowed Down Resent the Cruelty. But the Great Do Not Even Know Whom They Crush.

YOU may call this striking cartoon by Arthur Young "Getting Up in the World."

In this age, as in the ages past, those that are up in the world are UP very often because they walk on the backs of those that are DOWN.

The purpose of this cartoon and of this editorial is to promote among our readers fair discussion, honest, impartial thought, concerning the great problem of the rich and the poor.

It would be a fine thing if there were more among those great and powerful able to realize the conditions of those over whom they walk.

But we have no eyes in our feet, and the last thing we think of is the small and helpless creature crushed as we hurry along on our important errand.

It would be a good thing if the great could think more of those below them.

It would be an even better thing, perhaps, if the less fortunate could realize the condition of those below THEM.

The trouble with all of us is that we see only our side and not the side of others. We look up or straight ahead; we do not look down.

The old man with shoulders bowed beneath this huge pair of feet feels hatred for the power pressing down on him. He thinks that he is the victim of a wilful, vicious exercise of strength. But the force that crushes him is unconscious of his very existence, as he is unconscious of the ant or the worm crushed beneath HIS weight.

Men are not purposely cruel. They are not indifferent to the sufferings of others. The trouble is that we do not think, we do not realize. We take our own good fortune for granted. Our criticism is aimed at those more fortunate than ourselves, never at ourselves.

If we could all get a clear idea of life, every one of us would know that those below him vainly demand sympathy and justice from him, as he vainly demands sympathy and justice from those above him.

Undoubtedly the world would be better off if the owners of these huge feet, striding across the world, could look down with sympathetic interest at the masses below them.

But still more good would be done if the greedy body of the people, complaining of heartlessness above, would learn to criticize themselves.

You, the individual, think that it is a heartless thing for the trust to get out of you all that it can.

Do you, by any chance, get all YOU can out of some servant girl, or errand boy, or cheap clerk?

You think, perhaps, that the individual or the corporation that employs you is heartless because your salary is as small as it can be made.

Do you not try to pay a little as you possibly can for what you get?

You notice the heartless indifference of those above you whose generosity or kindness might make you happy. How often do you question yourself concerning your own kindness and generosity to those that look to you for help?

Have you ever seen a poor pedler, some bent old man with a heavy pack, attempt to board a street car?

And have you heard him greeted about as follows—by the motorman or conductor: "Get out of here—Get that bundle out of here. Do you think we have got nothing to do but carry you and your bundles?"

Have you seen the car roll on, its official looking proud of his power, joining in a general laugh at the expense of the helpless human being pushed back onto the street to carry his load on his back, or wait, hoping for kinder treatment from some other fellow worker?

There is no commoner sight than that in the great cities.

But if that motorman or conductor, with no heart for one weaker than himself, should be kicked out of work by the president or director of his road, what a howling and what a lamentation!

He would never cease talking about the heartlessness of the rich and their indifference to the woes of "The poor man."

We would not preach, by any means, humble submission to those big feet that walk over the backs of the crowd. They should be made to walk elsewhere, and the crowd should straighten up.

But we should deal more intelligently with our problem if we could realize how much that seems to us deliberate heartlessness or villainy is simply lack of imagination or ignorance.

And we should deal very much more intelligently with our problem if we began by perfecting ourselves, by developing in ourselves qualities of kindness and justice which we so urgently require in others.

Don't have any big feet walking over you if you can help it. Explain very energetically to the owners that they must be careful where they walk.

But make sure as to the location of our own feet. Don't overlook your own shortcomings in the contemplation of the wickedness of those above you.

the nations may not altogether like his criticism, yet there is no evidence that will convict him of bias.

Of old-time successes and failures

he writes learnedly enough. But it

Truly the task before Germany is beyond these spheres she does not go.

She is not a business woman; she

In America the Hungarian will set

The stunning block to such an al-

Was the clergyman telling the truth, or was he laboring under an honest delusion?

There is no question as to the fact, and with those who would agree with him, is this they confound religion with theology, and decline, because the latter is having such a run of it that the former is being overlooked. It is a great mistake to fall into a mistake

LABOR OPPOSES EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

Regards Them as a Menace to Unions' Efforts at Protecting Workers' People but Agencies Deny That This Is the Truth

BOSTON LABOR LEADERS GIVE THEIR ATTITUDE.

Employment agencies, which are supposed to help workers find employment, are regarded by labor leaders as a menace to the efforts of unions to protect the interests of their members. The agencies are said to be "middlemen" who take a commission from the employer and the worker, and are accused of "stealing" the workers' jobs. Labor leaders deny that this is the truth, and say that the agencies are simply "middlemen" who help workers find employment.

TRADES UNIONS ARE OPPOSED TO COMPULSORY ARBITRATION

Think It Is a Logical Absurdity, as Enforcement by a Tribunal Makes It Simply Tyranny and Not Arbitration at All

By Frank K. Foster.

The trades unions are opposed to compulsory arbitration because they believe it is a logical absurdity. They believe that arbitration should be a voluntary process, and that it should not be enforced by a tribunal. They believe that compulsory arbitration is simply tyranny, and that it is not arbitration at all.

CANADA MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP NOT PROFITABLE.

Losses Show in Majority of Cases Where Control of Gas, Electric and Water Plants Has Been Assumed

By Frank K. Foster.

Municipal ownership of gas, electric, and water plants in Canada has not been profitable. In a majority of cases, the municipalities have incurred losses since they assumed control of the plants. This is because the municipalities are not able to manage the plants as efficiently as the private companies.

STUDY OF A WOMAN'S SOUL STARTLES THE SMART SET

London Society Stirred by the Remarkable Analysis Made by a Man of the Subtleties and Foibles of the Fair Sex.

MOST interesting and startling of the books of the week is "The Woman With the Fan," published in London, and dealing closely with the "smart set" of the great English metropolis. It is a remarkable study of a woman's soul, and what makes it the more astonishing is the fact that this analysis of woman's psychic existence, revealing subtleties that amaze even those with whom it directly deals, is made by a man.

By Sibyl Wilbur. HOW can a man write a book about a woman's soul? This is the question that arises in the mind of the reader who picks up "The Woman With the Fan." The answer is, it is a study of a woman's soul, and what makes it the more astonishing is the fact that this analysis of woman's psychic existence, revealing subtleties that amaze even those with whom it directly deals, is made by a man.

Society Sideights. The book is a study of a woman's soul, and what makes it the more astonishing is the fact that this analysis of woman's psychic existence, revealing subtleties that amaze even those with whom it directly deals, is made by a man.

In a Horror of Dumbness. The book is a study of a woman's soul, and what makes it the more astonishing is the fact that this analysis of woman's psychic existence, revealing subtleties that amaze even those with whom it directly deals, is made by a man.

But at this point she recognized a fact recognized by thousands of women with exasperation, sometimes with despair—that men would often read a touch that gives the revealing-draws them to women not their own.

Gravest of All Offences. The book is a study of a woman's soul, and what makes it the more astonishing is the fact that this analysis of woman's psychic existence, revealing subtleties that amaze even those with whom it directly deals, is made by a man.

The very gravest offence among women is to find out one's dress-maker, and have given the name that is like one's own, but perhaps a trifle more effective.

BREWERY IS TO ACROBATIC HORSE OCCUPY A CHURCH CHOKES ON ITS HOOF

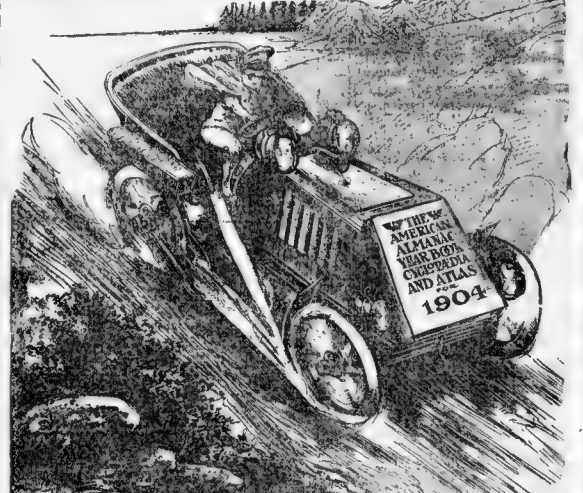

Accident to the horse at the church. The horse was killed by a locomotive in an accident at the Lark station railroad crossing, which resulted in the death of a horse and the destruction of a buggy. The man was not seriously hurt.

SLEEPING VOLCANOES

A thin, vapory smoke, rising from its crater, may be the only visible sign of life in the sleeping volcano; but within is a raging sea of fire, molten rock and sulphur gases. Those who make their homes in the peaceful valleys below know the danger, and though frequently warned by the rumblings and quakings, these signs of impending eruption go unheeded. They are living in false security, when the giant awakes with deafening roars, and they are lost beneath a downpour of heated rock and scalding ashes. Thousands of blood-poor sufferers are living upon a sleeping volcano, and are taking desperate chances, for under the mercury and potash

Bowling Green, Ky., Mar. 24, 1902. Contaminant. For over four years I suffered greatly from a severe case of contagious blood poison. I went to Hot Springs, staying there four months at a big expense. I then consulted physicians, who prescribed Mercury. Nothing did me any good. In fact, the treatment proved more harmful than beneficial. I mentioned my case to a friend, who told me that Dr. S. S. S. had actually cured him. I at once commenced the use, and after continuing it for a few days, I had no trace of the disease whatever. This was about two years ago. I can truly say I am entirely well. D. M. SANDERS

Doom of Russian Fortress Is Regarded Now As Matter of

Fort When Plans Are Ready

RUSSIAN FLEET WILL DASH FOR LIBERTY

London, June 11.—The naval rumor of Port Arthur fell was repeated today, and the latest confirmation thereof is that credit is well founded. It is well known that these rumors are not only a result of the inevitable fate of the Russian stronghold, but also a result of the fact that the Japanese are now in a position to take the fortress. As the time necessary for the Japs to complete their assault upon the fortress is estimated at three months, it is probable that the Russian fleet will dash for liberty within three weeks.

The officers of the Mikado II are said to have been killed, but the Russian fleet is not yet in a position to take the fortress. It is believed that the Russian fleet will dash for liberty within three weeks.

Millionaire Bankrupt Says Payment of Old Debts And Making of New Fortune Easy with a Lucky Wife to Help Him

LEWIS GREENE TOWNSBURY, A MILLIONAIRE BANKRUPT, OWNS OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST PACERS, MAN ABOUT TOWN AND THE CENTRAL FIGURE IN A FINANCIAL CRASH, WHICH SHOOK WALL STREET TO ITS FOUNDATIONS FOUR YEARS AGO, HAS ADDED ANOTHER CHAPTER TO HIS REMARKABLE CAREER, BY WEDDING MISS ANDREW BUTLER, THE WOMAN FROM WHOM HE WAS DIVORCED SHORTLY BEFORE HIS STARTLING DEPARTURE FROM NEW YORK, AFTER HIS FINANCIAL COLLAPSE.

Townsbury says that his wife is his mascot, that he would not think of making a move in the financial world without her advice, and now that she is again at his side he proposes in a single year to pay dollar for dollar the debts against him in New York and accumulate new millions.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS HIGHER LEVEL IS NOT IMPROBABLE

Strong Undercurrent of Bearishness Believed to Exist, Reflecting Unrest in Many Sections of Country.

Bearishness in the stock market may be the result of the fact that the market has been for some time at a high level, and the possibility of a decline is not improbable. MARCONI PRICE ADVANCES 20 PER CENT.

There is no necessity for argument on the question of buying Marconi securities, at this time. The popular demand is so great that we will have closed out the present allotment before June 20th. On that date the price will advance 20 per cent. It is for you to decide whether you want to pay 20 per cent. more in a few days. That is the only point to be decided. You certainly must be convinced that there has never been so good an opportunity for profitable investment since Bell Telephone Shares were first offered to the public. Every indication points to the completion and certain supremacy of the Marconi system in the matter of transatlantic, transpacific and intercity telegraph.

The British Government has adopted it in all departments. The Italian Government has adopted it in all departments. The Canadian Government has adopted it and has heavily subsidized the system. The Newfoundland Government has adopted and subsidized it. The Danish, Swedish, Norwegian and Dutch Governments are negotiating for its adoption. France, Portugal, Spain and Austria-Hungary have adopted the system with a view to its adoption. The Argentine Republic and other South American countries are preparing for the erection of long-distance lines.

The United States Government has not yet adopted Marconi's system, but the desire of the Government to obtain the best will probably lead to its adoption as it has in all countries where competitive tests and examinations have been held. More important even than Governmental action is the commercial development of the system. This has progressed rapidly under wise management. The English company earned a big surplus last year. The American company's revenue increased 700 per cent. Most conservative estimates of the earning power of the system indicate that, when complete and in running order, the annual profits will be sufficient to pay over 150 per cent. dividend on the entire capitalization of the company annually.

LONDON TRADING EASIER AT CLOSE

LONDON, June 11.—Although the early trading in the London market was slow, considerable strength in all departments, and particularly in American, the tone of the close was easier, induced by the fact that several new loan issues are in sight. There has been no abnormal movement, however, in the price of the new loan issues. The market has been quiet, and the price of the new loan issues is in line with the market. The market has been quiet, and the price of the new loan issues is in line with the market.

RESOLVED: THAT THE SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS ON THE ALLOTMENT OF TREASURY STOCK NOW OFFERED AT $5 PER SHARE (PAR VALUE $10 EACH) BE CLOSED AT 5 P. M. THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1904, AND THAT A SECOND ALLOTMENT OF TREASURY STOCK BE IMMEDIATELY OFFERED FOR PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTION AT $6.50 PER SHARE.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of a resolution unanimously adopted by the full Board of Directors of the International Electro-Chemical Company, at a meeting held at the office of the company, in Boston, June 10, 1904.

E. D. CHAPLIN, Secretary.

The Company expressly reserves the right to reject any and all subscriptions, or to allot smaller amounts than may be applied for. Payment for stock will be accepted on the following basis:

25 per cent. of the amount subscribed for on application,
25 per cent. of the amount subscribed for on June 20th, 25 per cent. of the amount subscribed for on July 10th, and the remaining 25 per cent. of the amount subscribed for on August 1st. Payment may be made in full at time of application under discount of 3 per cent. from price thereof. ANARCHISTS PUT MONARCHS IN FEAR.

"Reds" from Paterson, N. J., Arrive in Paris, and Rumors of Plots Against the Czar and Alfonso of Spain Are Current

NICHOLAS CALLS ON 'NEVER STIRS WITHOUT A WARDEN GOING WITH HER'

Special Cable to Sunday American. Paris, June 11.—There are ominous signs of renewed anarchistic activity in this city and the most serious group of "Reds" to be met in the most dangerous group of "Reds" at Paterson, N. J., have arrived here on the way to Italy, and are being closely watched.

Though it has been tried to keep it a secret, it is well known here that several conspiracies against the life of the Czar have been hatched in the last few days, and that they are being actively carried out. It is believed that the Czar is being watched by a large number of men, and that they are being kept in a state of constant alert.

A message has been received from the Russian government suggesting an international convention against the anarchists. This document, which is being circulated in the city, is believed to be a genuine one, and is being taken seriously by the government.

A few papers, however, claim to have obtained the mystery.

"MAD" PRINCESS VISITED BY STEALTH.

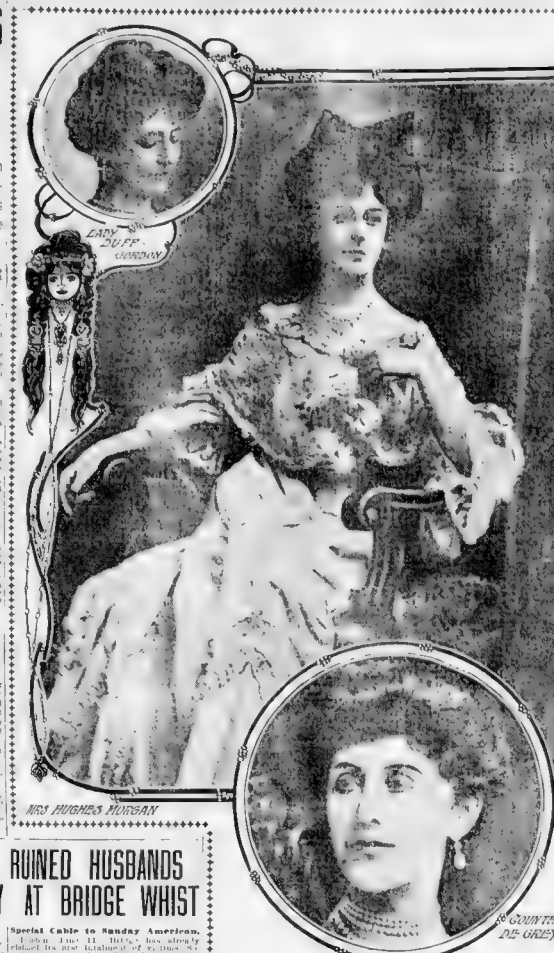

Count Metchich, with Whom Eldest Daughter of King Leopold Eloped, Declares She Is a Prisoner in a Madhouse

NEVER STIRS WITHOUT A WARDEN GOING WITH HER

Special Cable to Sunday American. Paris, June 11.—The truth about the imprisonment of the Princess Louise de Saxe-Coburg is revealed here by Count Metchich, the man who knows it best. The Princess is the eldest daughter of the King of the Belgians, and the Count is the cavalry officer of the Belgian Army with whom she eloped.

It was last night that the Count was imprisoned, and he is now in a madhouse, where he is being treated by a doctor. The Princess is also in a madhouse, and she is being treated by a doctor. The Count is being treated by a doctor, and the Princess is being treated by a doctor.

Sebastopol Editor Recanted His Story of a Street Urchin Giving an Icon of the Holy Virgin to Admiral Skrydloff

Special Cable to Sunday American. Berlin, June 11.—A curious story is published in the German press, the Russian official daily paper at Sebastopol.

On day as the editor was sitting in his station he received a visit from a little fellow, dressed in a red coat and a red cap, who brought him a small icon of the Holy Virgin.

The editor, who is a well-known man, was very much surprised by the visit, and he asked the little fellow where he had found the icon.

The little fellow, who is a cossack dwarf, told him that he had found it in a cave, and that it was a very old icon.

The editor, who is a well-known man, was very much surprised by the visit, and he asked the little fellow where he had found the icon.

JAMES J. JEFFRIES.

JEFFRIES SAYS HE'LL BE ALL RIGHT.

(Boston Herald, June 11.) I will enter the ring with my old enemy, Jack Munroe, on Monday night. I have been in the hospital for some time, but I am now in good health. I have been taking a lot of medicine, but I feel better now. I will win out—James J. Jeffries.

MUNROE THINKS HE'S A GOOD CHANCE.

(Boston Herald, June 11.) In less than a week from now, I will be in the ring with the great James J. Jeffries. I am in good health and I feel that I have a good chance of winning. I will be all right.

CANDY CATHARTIC

PREVENT ALL SUMMER BOWEL TROUBLES
Underfed food in the human bowels is fermenting and produces gas, which is quickly in summer as in winter. Consequently, stomach, liver, bowels, are poisoned, throwing out of order, sour stomach, gas, colic, diarrhea, dysentery, cholera, appendicitis, and to some extent yellow fever and the plague. Little children suffer terribly everywhere. The proper thing is to send all impure and unnecessary matter out of the body every day—not give it a chance to over the stomach and bowels. You will stop hot, feverish complaints and keep your muscles cool and healthy. To do it, use a medicine that is pleasant to the taste and not harsh and violent in its action. The only safe system—never to taste in summer, because it will not give you any more or give you any more. All druggists, 10c, 25c, 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped C.C.C. (Cascarets) is made of pure money back, sample and booklet free. Starting Remedy Co., Chicago or New York.

1. LULU: "Oh, Leander, what is the matter with this brook? When we came over it was nearly dry. What are we to do?"
LEANDER: "Some one has opened the sluice gates. There is only one thing to be done. I'll have to carry you across."

2. LULU: "Oh, Leander, isn't this romantic? Do you really think you can carry me without letting me fall?"
LEANDER: "Why, my sweetheart, I could carry you if you weighed twice what you do!"

3. LULU: "Oh, Leander, what have you done? Why didn't you look out? You are always getting into trouble. Thank goodness, here comes Charley Onthespot."
LEANDER: "W-E-E-O-W!"

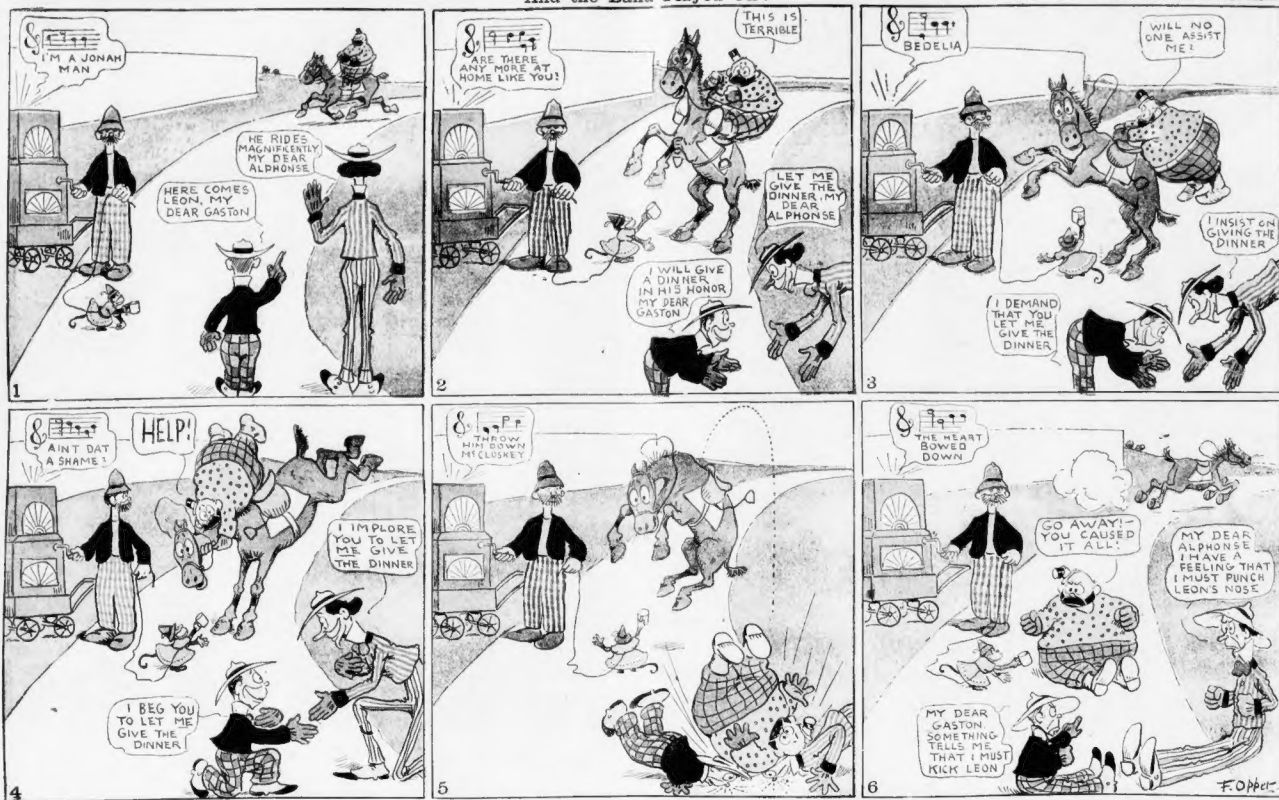

4. LEANDER: "Oh! oh! oh! oh! I've stubbed my toe! I've broken it, I'm sure! Oh! oh! oh! oh!"
LULU: "Oh, my poor, poor Leander! He does get into such trouble. Poor Leander!"
CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "Gee, old man, you've got a dandy stone bruise there."

5. LEANDER: "Walk? I can hardly stand, Lulu. Oh, this is fearful."
LULU: "Oh, what are we to do? How shall we ever get across the brook?"
CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "I'll arrange it all, Lulu. Say, old man, you'll not be able to get your shoe on for some time. Leave everything to me."

6. LULU: "Oh, Charley, you always come in the nick o' time. What should we have done without you?"
CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "You stay right there, Leander. I'll have a man and a carriage up here for you in ten minutes. I'll take care of Lulu."
LEANDER: "Ye gods! Just see her in his arms with her arms about his neck. Did a lover EVER have such hairstranding luck?"
